New pump station, and pumps from 1911 are retired

■ Old pumps played a role in keeping the living room carpets dry in Southport for about a century

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A pair of drainage pumps in Southport that have been diligently working or on call for about a century have just been retired.

The City of West Sacramento and Reclamation District 900 on Nov. 18 celebrated the opening of a new pump station designed to help move water out of Southport and over the deep water channel levee when ever flooding threatens.

The old pumps were "pretty low tech," said Ken Ruzich, manager of Reclamation District 900, which monitors a lot of the city's levees and waterways. "They were similar to a hunk of metal that goes around in a circle. They're not running on bearings, just bushings. They're almost like a water wheel inside a casing."

It was the job of those wheels to take water from Southport's canal system when it got overloaded, and push the water over a levee into the deep water shipping canal that serves the port. The original pumps from 1911 were electric, although one was converted to diesel power in the 1950s.

In 1980, the old pumps got some reinforcements.

"We put in three electric pumps right next to it, and they've been doing the bulk of the work," Ruzich said. Even with the brand-new station, they continue to do so, he said.

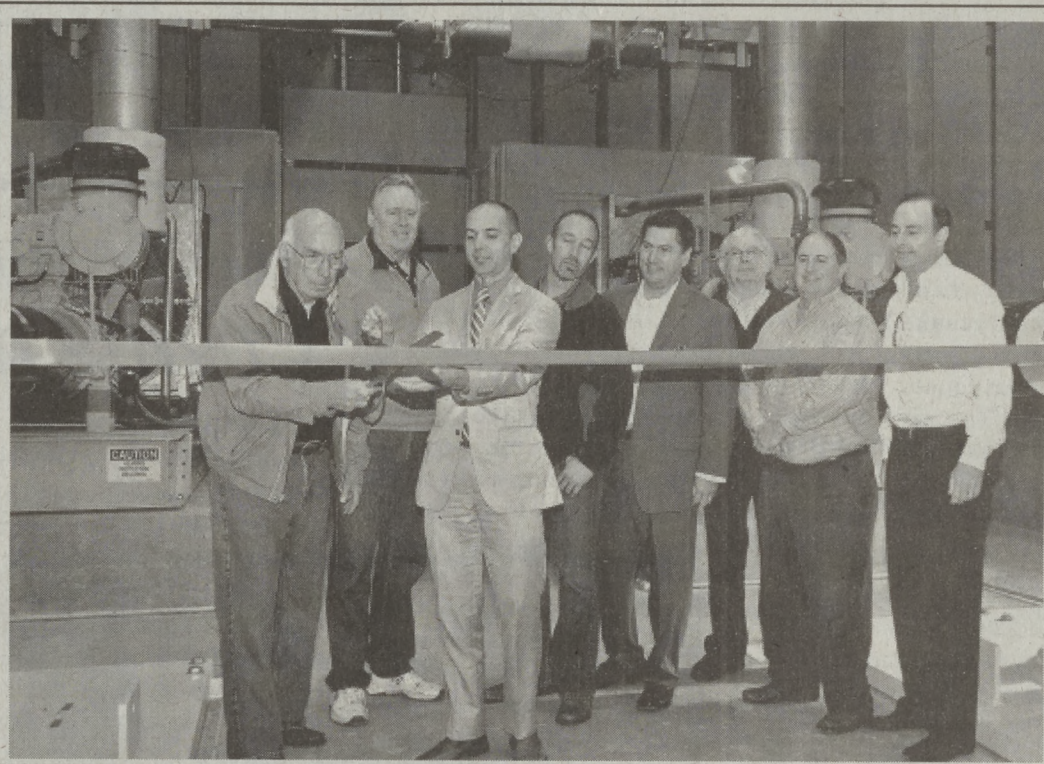

"In a normal year, we will run them just to keep them lubricated," said Ruzich. "They're just for really big storms."

And what would happen during some "really big storms" if the pumps weren't around?

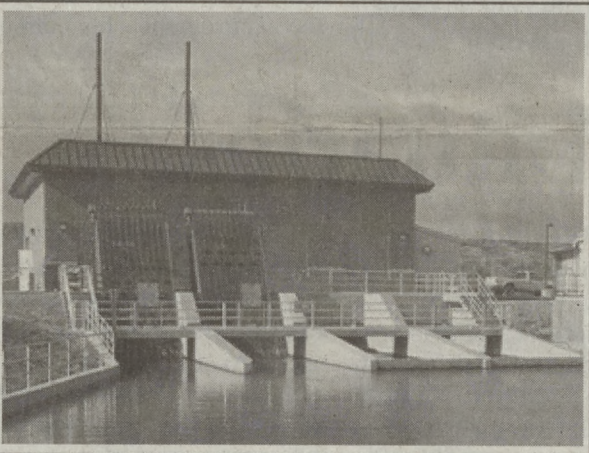

"In a bad year, since Southport's pretty flat, you'd put several thousand acres under water," he answered. "It might be only a foot or two, but that's pretty inconvenient when it's your living room."

The new pumps are diesel, served by a 5,000-gallon fuel tank on the site. The facility runs automatically most of the time. The Main Drain Pump Station is now capable of moving up to 150,000 gallons of water per minute out of southern West Sacramento.

"The fuel in the tank will last two to three years, with normal operations," said Ruzich. The diesel pumps have the advantage of being able to work through a power failure.

And a nearby generator used at a city water storage facility can kick in to power the older electric pumps if they're needed and the power is out, he said.

Do the new pumps work?

They haven't yet been put to the test by rain or by a crack in a levee, but when they flipped the switch on Nov. 18 for local city council members and other dignitaries, the water indeed flowed out of Southport and into the canal.

Ruzich said the pump project cost about $12 million. It was a combined city/reclamation district project.

Are there alternatives to redevelopment?

■ Governor Brown wants West Sac to 'pay to play': cost would be $6.5 million up front

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A "blue ribbon commission" set up by Mayor Christopher Cabaldon is now looking at how West Sacramento can keep doing big things if it loses one of its favorite tools: the local redevelopment agency. The agency's existence is currently threatened by the governor's budget-balancing plan.

City Councilman Chris Ledesma is chairing the city blue ribbon commission — and he told the News-Ledger this week that there are some glimmers of hope coming out of his group's research.

"You can't minimize what the loss would be to the city," Ledesma said. "It is a big deal. The agency has facilitated a lot of the things you see in West Sacramento today."

The local redevelopment agency has helped build the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge on Lake Washington Boulevard (which in turn, helped enable development of Southport). It also helped rebuild part of West Capitol Avenue and attract Raley

Council Member

Field and the ziggurat building, for example.

What if the agency goes away?

"There are still some tools out there and some opportunities out there — but it's going to take a little more work," said Ledesma, who manages a small business loan division for Wells Fargo bank.

At the moment, the fate of redevelopment agencies across the state is in limbo. Governor Jerry Brown has proposed to make each local agency either dissolve itself or pay a hefty fee to the state in order to stay in business.

"The price (for West Sacramento) to opt in is $6.5 million," Ledesma commented. "Subsequent annual payments would be set at around $1.5 million. . . Personally,

I don't see us coming up with the $6.5 million, but that's up to the entire council."

Mayor Cabaldon has told the News-Ledger that the city just can't afford it.

And if the city does scrape together the "pay to play" money from its recession-racked budget, Ledesma worries about future state budgets, and future unilateral state decisions.

"What's to keep the state from raiding us again?"

The governor's plan is now in front of the state supreme court, under a legal challenge. Local officials expect that Brown's plan could either get tossed out, or modified, or upheld by the California justices. The court has fast-tracked the hearing and promised a decision next month.

What's the problem with losing West Sacramento's redevelopment agency?

One special power such an agency is the ability to sell bonds to pay for big-ticket infrastructure projects in much of the city. The agency can promise to pay back those bonds with some of the new property taxes expected to come in after this work is done and development is enabled. This piece of the new property tax pie in the future is called "property tax increment." Redevelopment agencies can legally earmark the tax increment for certain local projects. By fixing streets or sewers, or building bridges or doing other work, the redevelopment agency can spur growth — and then use that growth to pay for the work it did up front.

"The biggest thing you can do with a redevelopment agency is to use 'tax increment' financing," said Ledesma.

But even if West Sacramento keeps its agency alive after January, packaging and selling those bonds may not be as easy as it was before the "Great Recession."

"Even with our redevelopment agency, the bond market isn't in great shape, and the financing may not be there anymore," Ledesma commented. "We might have to learn to get along without tax increment financing anyway."

So the work of this "blue ribbon commission" may come in handy whether West Sacramento still has a redevelopment agency next February or not, said Ledesma. Committee members are looking hard at other tools in use around the nation to facilitate expensive infrastructure and development projects. For example: "Washington State doesn't have redevelopment, but they have been able to get along with 'community development corporations,' which are nonprofit agencies."

These independent agencies are set up in cooperation with local government, and they're charged with helping to put together up-front financing to take care of obstacles to growth. They're analogous to the West Sac- See REDEVELOPMENT, p. 3

We have it so easy here in the wintertime

I was having one of those online chats with a friend the other day who lives back in Chicago and she suddenly asked me how I was doing on my winterizing.

"Winterizing?" I asked. "What is that?" "You know," she explained, "getting your house and garage and car and everything else all ready for the winter."

"Nope," I said, "we don't do any of that out here. This is the Sunshine State, remember?"

"But you do have a winter, don't you?"

"Oh sure, but all that means to me is that I have to break out a few sweaters and my windbreaker."

"You're kidding?" she asked, amazed. "You don't get any snow at all?"

"Not a single flake where I live," I assured her.

"Never?"

"Never."

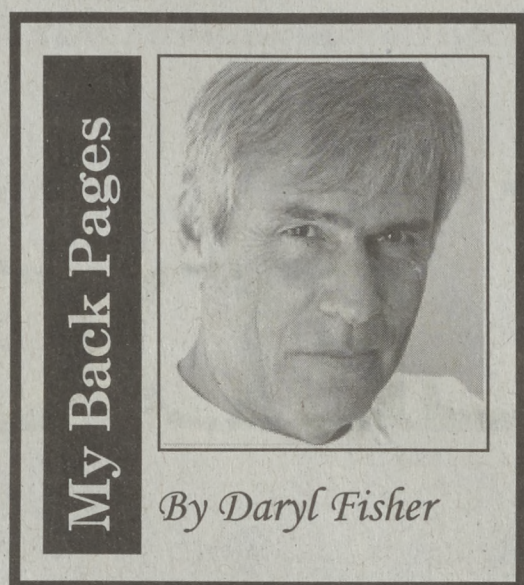

"Do you have any idea how lucky you are?"

"Probably not," I admitted.

"Well," she said, "let me give you an idea of what you're missing. Out here at this time of year, we start with the outside of the house first. All the gutters need to be cleaned out, checked for leaks and sealed. The storm windows have to be sealed, too, and all the exterior faucets shut off, bled out and covered to prevent freezing. Foundation cracks have to be inspected and sealed, as does the roof. We have to make sure all the downspouts are securely attached because it's usually ice that causes the big problems, not the snow. The air conditioner unit has to be blown out and then covered securely with a metal tarp. Oh, and all the wood has to be chopped up, stacked and properly covered, and any plants you want to make it through the winter have to be taken inside. Then I turn my attention to the garage."

"The garage?" I asked with interest. "Why does that have to be winterized?"

"Because a lot of the really important stuff you will need to survive a Chicago winter is in there. For instance, the rock salt has to be inventoried to make sure we have plenty of it on hand. Then I get out the snow blower and do a very basic tune up, you know, making sure the blades are working and that there is plenty of oil in it. I also break out the snow shovels which will stay on the front and back porches all the way until spring. Oh, and I also have to put a big bucket of rock salt next to the front door to make sure we don't slip and kill ourselves when the ice gets here."

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

"Wow," I said, "that's a lot of work just to get ready for a change in seasons."

"And that's just the exterior of the house," she continued. "On the inside, the boiler has to be checked, the covers on the radiators have to be taken off and vacuumed, and all the winter gear — coats, hats, gloves and boots — has to be gotten out. And if you have a son who never stops growing like mine does, you have to make sure everything still fits. My husband actually has winter survival suits, and they have to be inspected every year, too, along with his winter ice cleats, heavy-duty jeans and sweaters. Oh, and the winter bedding has to all be taken out and washed, including the flannel sheets, heavy blankets, and winter comforters. We even have heated mattress pads now, although I still consider that a decadent luxury."

"You know," I said, "where I live here in West Sacramento, about the only thing I really do for winter is start closing the front door during the day instead of just using the screen door."

"You don't even have to do anything to your car?" she asked in amazement.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Out here," she explained, "we have to take our cars and have snow tires put on them. I also pack our cars with a winter survival kit and check all the supplies I keep in the trunks, like extra gloves, ice scrappers, and folding shovels. I also put heavy blankets in both of the cars, as well as hand and boot warmers. I change all the batteries in the flashlights and replace the fire extinguishers. I used to even keep lots of extra windshield wiper fluid in the cars, but all that sloshing around drove me crazy."

As our little online chat continued, I also learned that wintertime in Chicago means bundling up until you look like the Michelin Man and not even being able to move your head without turning your whole body at the same time; and trying to stand upright during blizzards when the wind chill is minus-thirty degrees; and hugging the sides of downtown buildings when you're out shopping because pedestrians are killed every year from ice falling down upon them; and just trying to survive the cabin fever that always goes along with a long, harsh Mid-Western winter.

"So," I finally said, "I take it you don't think a guy like me, who was born and raised in all this wonderful California sunshine and doesn't even own a winter coat and boots,

'We start with the outside of the house first. All the gutters need to be cleaned out, checked for leaks and sealed. The storm windows have to be sealed, too, and all the exterior faucets shut off, bled out and covered to prevent freezing. Foundation cracks have to be inspected and sealed, as does the roof. . .'

would do very well in one of your Chicago winters, do you?"

"I'm afraid you would quickly turn into a Darylsicle, and to tell you the truth, you would probably be dead before the spring ever got here!"

ramento Housing Development Corporation, set up to facilitate affordable housing in this city, said Ledesma.

If West Sacramento can't or won't keep its redevelopment agency alive after the state court's ruling in January, there will be another kind of local fallout. The local agency will be forced to sell off all its various land-holdings around town, quickly, regardless of real estate market conditions. The sell-off could include some properties earmarked for use in public roadway projects and so forth – and which may later have to be bought back. And the proceeds from what the mayor has termed a "fire sale" would have to be split among a number of regional agencies – instead of being returned to West Sacramento taxpayers.

The city council has tried to blunt some of the potential fallout from that scenario. For example, it has sold an "option to buy" the redevelopment agency's Stone Lock District acreage near the barge canal to the Port of West Sacramento. The port is controlled by the city. By selling the "option," the council presumably protected the property from state-ordered liquidation.

Ledesma said his group of public- and private-sector volunteers is winding up its research and will try to provide some guidance in a final report.

"We're trying to provide a path for the city council," he said.

One thing that surprised him a little bit as that the commission hasn't found a lot of other cities or counties out there doing the same kind of exhaustive study.

"For whatever reason, a lot of redevelopment agencies are simply planning to (pay the state) and opt in. We're one of the few in the state that's looking at this so hard."

IN LOVING MEMORY

Jim Boswell (2/27/1921 – 11/13/2011)

Jim moved from Ottawa, Kansas, to Napa, California in the late 1930's and was employed by the Basalt Rock Company for four years. He drove a 5-6 ton bobtail semi-trailer, hauling feed, farm produce and construction materials. He did the loading and unloading of the truck and averaged 100 miles per-day. He joined the Army on March 31, 1943 and was a Private First Class in the 258th Engineer Combat Battalion, located in the European Theater of Operation. He was a warehouseman, motor boat operator, light duty truck driver, and also drove a 2 1/2 ton truck hauling ammunition and demolition. He did general repair and maintenance on the vehicle and was also the chauffeur for the battalion commander.

Jim received several medals, including the Good Conduct Medal, World War II Victory Medal, European African Middle Eastern Campaign Medal, and the American Campaign Medal. A Lapel Button was issued and he was a Marksman with the M-1 rifle. He was honorably discharged from military service on March 21, 1946. He was a lifetime member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post #8762, and was its commander from 1972 to 1973. He loved to cook and introduced the Super Bowl Gin Fizz breakfast and the Monday Night Football dinners. He was also responsible for organizing the yearly Fourth of July picnic and the VFW Open Golf Tournament in the 1970's at Alta Sierra with his buddy, Art Edmonds. Mino Ohye, a veteran, dear friend and golf partner, worked together maintaining the grounds at the VFW for many years. He was also a member of the Military Order of the Louse Hut #4.

Jim was an avid golfer for many years and he and his wife, Joanne, sponsored VFW Fun Days Golf Tournament in Reno and Carson City, Nevada, for 16 years. His home course was the Davis Community Golf Course (DCGC) and Jim and Joanne participated in many of the golf tournaments throughout the United States sponsored by DCGC.

Jim worked for P.I.E. Trucking Company for over 20 years and was a member of the Teamsters. He was a fastball pitcher for Western Highway Oil in Southside Park in the 1950's and was a coach and manager for the West Sacramento Little League in the 1960's. He taught his sons, Jim Jr. and Kenny, how to fish at the "old" Lake Washington.

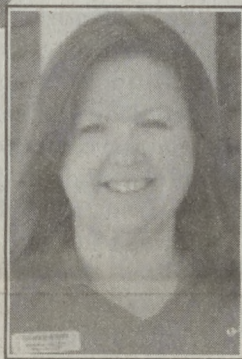

A Celebration of Life gathering was held for Jim at the West Sacramento VFW Hall, Post #8762, on November 26, 2011. He was a kind and gentle man who cared deeply about his family and community and he will be greatly missed by all those who knew and loved him. Cremation arrangements were under the direction of River Cities Funeral Chapel.

As customers decorate homes and trees this holiday season, Pacific Gas and Electric Company (PG&E) encourages them to keep safety and energy efficiency in mind. Holiday lights bring joy to the season, but they can also bring hazards and added costs to your energy bill. PG&E offers the following holiday lighting tips:

Holiday Lighting Energy Efficiency

Purchase energy-efficient LED (light-emitting diode) holiday lights. LED lights can reduce energy consumption by as much as 90% when compared to traditional holiday lights and can shine brightly for up to 20 holiday seasons.

A string of 300 LED holiday lights can cost less than $0.50 to operate during the holiday season, compared to nearly $70.00 for a string of 300 large incandescent holiday lights.

LED holiday light strings are available at many retailers in Northern and Central California. For more information about LED holiday lighting, visit <http://www.pge.com/myhome/saveenergymoney/savingstips/seasonaltips/winter/led/index.shtml>.

Holiday Lighting Safety

In addition to being shatterproof and shock resistant,

LED lights produce almost no heat, making them safe to touch and greatly reducing the risk of fire.

Look up and live! Before stringing outdoor lights, check for overhead power lines. Never place yourself or any object—like a ladder—in a position where you or it may come in contact with a power line—the result can be fatal. Keep at least 10 feet away from overhead lines.

Before stringing lights on outdoor trees, make sure tree limbs haven't grown into or near power lines. Branches, entire trees and even the ground adjacent to a tree can become energized when trees contact power lines.

Make sure lights used to decorate the outside of the house are approved for outdoor use. Never use indoor lights outdoors.

Follow the manufacturer's limits for the number of light strings that can be connected together safely.

Check all light strands for cracked or broken plugs, frayed insulation or bare wires. Worn cords can cause fires, so discard damaged sets of lights.

Route cords inside your home so they won't trip anyone. Don't place them under rugs, furniture or other appliances. If covered, cords can overheat or become frayed, increasing the risk of fire.

Always turn off decorative lights—indoors and outdoors—when leaving the house and before going to bed.

Do not place your tree near a heat source such as a fireplace or heat vent. The heat will dry out the tree, making it more susceptible to fires caused by heat, flame or sparks.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company, a subsidiary of PG&E Corporation (NYSE:PCG), is one of the largest combined natural gas and electric utilities in the United States. Based in San Francisco, with 20,000 employees, the company delivers some of the nation's cleanest energy to 15 million people in Northern and Central California. GO FIGURE!

by Linda Thistle

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

Tower gateway

The City of West Sacramento today will celebrate the completion of the "east phase" of the Tower Bridge Gateway project—an endeavor that replaced the freeway-style approach to the Tower Bridge with a surface street connection. The new road scheme is intended to be friendly to vehicles (with a lower 35 m.p.h. speed limit) as well as to bikes and pedestrians. A ceremony is scheduled for 11 a.m. at the northeast corner of 3rd Street and Tower Bridge Gateway (park at Raley Field's Lot B-2). Mayor Christopher Cabaldon will deliver comments.

The Hope Stocking

Attend the "Hope Stocking Event" on Dec. 1, and help support the West Sacramento Foundation, which disburses grant money to local services for children, seniors, sports, arts, education and more. The festivities will be held from 5:30-8:30 p.m. at the Club Pheasant, 2525 Jefferson Blvd., and will feature hors d'oeuvres and holiday cheer. Donate and receive a commemorative "Hope Stocking." $25 in advance, $30 at the door. For information or to become a sponsor, call Maria, (916) 616-6512.

Honoring W.W. II vets

The West Sacramento Historical Society has launched a new display of World War II history—and this region's participation in it. You can browse the exhibit at the West Sacramento Community Center, 1075 West Capitol Avenue. The exhibit also invites new photos and memorabilia—call 374-1849. The society is also sponsoring an oral history collection from surviving World War II vets (whose average age is now 86). If you know a vet (with or without combat experience) who would like to participate in having his or her experience recorded for posterity, call 374-1849 for information.

Holiday party

The West Sacramento Historical Society and the San Pedro Association will hold a joint potluck holiday party from 3-6 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 4, at the community center, 1075 West Capitol Avenue. There will be door prizes and "a special visitor from the north." Bring a salad or side dish (ham, drinks and cake will be provided). There will be a raffle (donated items are needed). Call Sharon Freitas at 320-7156 or email safreitas@aol.com.

Buy candy, help kids

The West Sacramento Kiwanis bring back their annual holiday sale of See's Candy gift boxes. Proceeds will help send local kids to summer camp. Visit the candy shop this year between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m., Nov. 25 through Christmas Eve (Dec. 24). New location: 1001 Jefferson Blvd., Suite 800 (near the donut shop, just north of the Chevron station).

Christmas tree lighting

The Chamber of Commerce presents the annual lighting ceremony for the city Christmas tree from 6-8:30 p.m. on Dec. 2, in front of city hall at 1110 West Capitol Avenue. Free. There will be holiday music and refreshments, and kids can have their picture taken visiting with Santa. For more information, call 371-7042 or visit www.westsacramento-chamber.com and look in the "calendar" section.

Breakfast with Santa

The Chamber of Commerce presents two seatings of "Breakfast with Santa" on Sat., Dec. 10, at the Community Center, 1075 West Capitol Avenue. Enjoy brunch with St. Nick from 8:30-10 a.m. or 10:30-noon, along with "tons of Christmas-themed activities for children" including pancake decorating, a chance to send a letter to the North Pole and pictures with Santa.
